CHOOSE FROM THESE EVENTS:

9:30–10:30am

① War and Peace

A conversation with NOAH RICHLER, What We Talk About When We Talk About War, and MICHAEL RIORDON, Our Way to Fight, moderated by Jamie Swift. Richler explores how Canada's view of itself has changed from a nation of peacekeepers to a country at war, while Riordon tells stories of non-violent peace activities on both sides of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

- OR -

② Words Out Loud

Spoken word poet and slam artist LARA BOZABALIAN leads this dynamic hands-on writing workshop in new forms of poetic expression. Working individually and in small groups, students learn the basic concepts and strategies of spoken word and performance poetry through writing exercises, demonstrations, conversation, critique, and readings! Note: no limit to the number of participants.

10:45–11:45am

③ Life Lessons

African storyteller ADWOA BADOE, Between Sisters, and Y.S. LEE, The Agency: The Body at the Tower, read from their books and engage in lively discussion with Susan Olding. In these two spellbinding novels, teenage protagonists are saved from desperate circumstances then bend the rules to rise above their fate and fashion lives of their own.

- OR -

④ Technology & Wonder

A conversation between one of the most influential sci-fi writers today, ROBERT J. SAWYER, and science writer WAYNE GRADY. Sawyer, who started writing in grade ten, presents Wonder, the third in his WWW trilogy which features a 16-year-old girl who guides the evolution of the Web into consciousness. Grady's latest book, Technology, explores the human reliance on machines. Together they discuss technology, artificial intelligence, and the future of ideas.

12:30–2:00pm

⑤ Native Sons & Daughters

Former lieutenant-governor of Ontario and debut novelist JAMES BARTLEMAN reads from As Long as the Rivers Flow and discusses the impact of prejudice and racism on generations of First Nations people, with playwright Daniel David Moses.
